Psalm 79.1-9

1 O God, the heathen have come into your land:
they have defiled your holy temple, they have made Jerusalem a heap of stones.

2 They have given the dead bodies of your servants as food to the birds of the air:
and the flesh of your faithful ones to the wild beasts of the earth.
3 Their blood they have spilt like water on every side of Jerusalem:
and there is none to bury them.
4 We have become a mockery to our neighbours:
the scorn and laughing-stock of those about us.
5 How long, O Lord, shall your anger be so extreme:
will your jealous fury burn like fire?
6 Pour out your wrath on the nations that do not know you:
on the kingdoms that have not called upon your name.
7 For they have devoured Jacob:
and made his dwelling-place a desolation.
8 Do not remember against us the sin of former times:
but let your compassion hasten to meet us, for we are brought very low.
9 Help us, O God our saviour, for the honour of your name:
O deliver us and expiate our sins, for your name's sake. [10 Why should the heathen say 'Where is their God?':

From the Locum Tenens Rector Psalm 79.1-9

This psalm reflects the anguish and questioning that gripped Israel at the exile (587BCE), the very same that Jeremiah prophesied and wept over. Key theological questions that the exile posed were, "Where is their God?" posed by the nations and their enemies (10) and, "How long, O Lord?" (5). The psalmist vigorously argues in the form of a lament that the destruction of Jerusalem and the ensuing mass slaughter (see 2Kings 25.18-21) was a problem for God's reputation (1-4) (see Deuteronomy 32.8-9). After all, it was God's temple and God's city. So where are you God, in all this? This is a good question to keep in front of us especially in times of utter devastation. Is suffering a sign of God's weakness or a sign of eternal anger? The psalm answers this with the word of faith: a desire for forgiveness, presence and compassion. The psalmist turns from lament at the destruction of Jerusalem to prayer and supplication (5-9). The psalmist affirms against the odds that God will answer the questions. There is no romanticism about the psalms. The worshippers reckon with evil, they know that evil strikes at all that is most precious and crucial. Nevertheless, they affirm that God forgives, is compassionate and will bring salvation and deliverance. Go will do that because that is the glory of God's character. The prayer that God will pour out retributive anger on the nations who revile God and his people (6) (this is not incitement to holy war as the people are powerless) against the nations is always difficult for Christian readers. We are heirs to the New Testament call to the nations to receive salvation and healing through the cross, the emblem of the violence of the nations, suffering and shame that becomes the symbol of power and grace. So how should we say this verse today in worship? The Babylonians came to Jerusalem with their plans and designs, their cruelty and terror. They were not innocents. The harsh reality of life is that nations, tribes, and families can and do fall under the sway of violent and wilful power seeking, not seeking justice, mercy, or peace but violating the weak and helpless for their own political and material ends. We ought to pray to God in his justice and mercy to bring to an end such vile human endeavour.

Question: Where is God in this world's devastation? Our world is full of the struggle for wilful and violent power? What can we do? How can we pray?

NEW RECTOR ANNOUNCEMENT!!

The Clergy Appointment Board of Chris Cheah, Ian Cousins and Denise Manley are very happy and excited to advise that Bishop Stuart has appointed our choice of candidates to be our new rector. He is MARTIN JOHNSON. He is married to SUSAN and they will be coming from Brisbane to live in the rectory. At present Martin is a Chaplain in the Australian Army so we're currently unsure of when he will be able to join us but they are very pleased to be moving here so we must be patient for a little longer while events evolve. We give great thanks to God for his grace and mercy in leading Martin to our Parish and to Bishop Stuart for his discernment of God's will.

PRAYERS

• We pray for our children and young families. We pray we find someone to minister to them and we give thanks for the opportunities we have in this Parish. Amen.
