Psalm: 85.1-2, 8-13

- 1 O Lord, you were gracious to your land:
you restored the fortunes of Jacob.
- 2 You forgave the iniquity of your people:
and covered all their sin.
- 8 I will hear what the Lord God will speak:
for he will speak peace to his people, to his faithful ones, whose hearts are turned to him.
- 9 Truly his salvation is near to those that fear him:
and his glory shall dwell in our land.
- 10 Mercy and truth are met together:
righteousness and peace have kissed each other;
- 11 Truth shall flourish out of the earth:
and righteousness shall look down from heaven.
- 12 The Lord will also give us all that is good:
and our land shall yield its plenty.
- 13 For righteousness shall go before him:
and tread the path before his feet.

From the Rector

Dear Friends

I have been enjoying Handel's Oratorio Messiah this week, finding inspiration in that wonderful music. As you might have seen in last week's letter I have been trying to avoid the frantic Christmas build up and I went as far as bypassing the scriptures altogether let alone Rudolph and his cohort! But this week it is not possible. After Handel sets the scene with the overture Messiah begins with those words that we hear this morning from Isaiah chapter 40 - Comfort, O comfort my people, says your God. With these words the prophet encapsulates the very essence of the Advent season. God is coming to bring God's people home and we are to prepare a way for that homecoming to occur.

A poet was once asked if he could put into simple language what he meant in a particular poem. 'If I could do that' he responded 'I wouldn't have written the poetry.' This part of the Book of Isaiah is predominantly poetry and it describes the movement of people from exile to freedom. What Isaiah does is give his people back their faith by retelling the old story, the narrative that undergirds their faith, from exile to freedom; it is the same for us. This wonderful poetry, it is sometimes a little tricky to grasp but it describes the return from exile of the people of Israel, a generation returning from Babylon, Isaiah gives them back their faith.

I read a commentator this week who said: It is the despair of exile—from one's homeland and one's self—that is addressed in Second Isaiah's "Book of Consolation." And if the prophet's is a living word, it speaks not only to a people over twenty-five centuries ago. It confronts us. This is what it means to appropriate Holy Scripture as our own: not a disembodied historical text, but a message that penetrates our own reality.

What then of us? Advent is a time to consider where are we exiled or what is it that is holding us in exile? Advent – adventus, coming, is about coming home. We speak about God coming to us, but we must also consider the spirituality of the prodigal and his return from exile to the father who runs out to meet him. What is holding us back?

We can, each one of us, find something in our lives that keeps us from home, I hope and pray that we ponder it in this season. Just recognizing it is the beginning of renewal, it is perhaps the opportunity for a spiritual new year's resolution in this new church year. The good news is that the advent of Jesus really does offer the purifying and energizing gift of the Spirit, working a continuing conversion and spiritual Exodus. In the words of that famous Sci-Fi movie, 'ET phone home!!'

Blessings, Martin.
