Psalm 82

- 1 God has stood up in the council of heaven:
in the midst of the gods he gives judgement.
- 2 `How long will you judge unjustly:
and favour the cause of the wicked?
- 3 `Judge for the poor and fatherless:
vindicate the afflicted and oppressed.
- 4 `Rescue the poor and needy:
and save them from the hands of the wicked.
- 5 `They do not know, they do not understand, they walk about in darkness:
all the foundations of the earth are shaken.
- 6 `Therefore I say, "Though you are gods:
and all of you children of the Most High,
- 7 ` "Nevertheless you shall die like a mortal:
and fall like one of the princes."
- 8 Arise, O God, and judge the earth:
for you shall take all nations as your possession.

From the Rector

Dear Friends,

We at St Philip's speak often of being a community of inclusion. Indeed if you look at our website we cite five 'marks' which describe our way: Inclusion, Relevance, Caring, Relationship, Worship. The first is inclusion. But Jesus' words today in Luke's gospel highlight something of the difficulty we encounter when trying to live out this element of the Christian life. 'Do you think that I have come to bring peace to the earth? No, I tell you, but rather division!' Oh dear, after all the angels said at Jesus' birth about peace on earth and good will, he appears to up end it all! So what of our ethic?

What we must do is remember that Jesus holds before us a vision of the Kingdom of God. Peace on earth is the stuff of the kingdom, along with all the other things we strive for, love, hope, joy, justice. But getting there is not easy and there are times when division is the inevitable result of our strivings. Even with the best will in the world, with humility and repentance there are times when there will be division, Jesus is nothing if not realistic. So what do we do? Well we hold fast to the vision, the ideal and that means that we understand inclusion as being 'of God.' I think it was Rowan Williams who suggested that we need to be welcoming, inclusion is something that comes later...much later! For all of us!!

I read during the week a piece which has helped. It arrived in my in box from Canon Scott, it was by Sam Webb who is the Vicar of St Martin's in the Fields in Trafalgar Square. He comments on the phrase 'I see where you're coming from' and goes on from there:

If we try to reconcile where we're coming from, we'll never manage it – we'll be defeated by difference, deflated by diversity, discouraged by divergence. That all changes if we follow St Paul and start to concentrate on where we're going. We're going to heaven – where there is more than enough love for all, more than enough joy, more than enough truth, more than enough space for everyone to flourish.

So we arrive at a definition of the church: a bunch of people who all come from different places but are all going to the same place. Yes, it's interesting where we're coming from. But in the end, that names irreconcilable difference and damaging diversity. What's vital is where we're going: a space where diversity is our biggest asset and a kaleidoscope is a sign of abundance.

Being a Christian transforms our identity. No longer are we trying to assert our assumptions as normal, demanding that everyone hear how much we've suffered to ensure they excuse our eccentricities, imposing our prejudices on others so we never have to be challenged or changed. Now we're a people pooling our resources for a journey we make together to a place none of us have ever been. There are no experts, because we're all citizens of a country we've never visited and longing for a home we've never known.

Living in community will lead to division often because we are struggle to understand someone's position. We need to be a welcoming community of folk, our minds and hearts fixed on where we're going, running with perseverance the race that is set before us.

Blessings, Martin.
